

2017 IEEE Medal of Honor Awarded to CE Society Member

IEEE's highest award, the Medal of Honor, has been bestowed upon IEEE Consumer Electronics (CE) Society member and IEEE Life Fellow Dr. Kornelis (Kees) A. Schouhamer Immink. The award was given "for pioneering contributions to video, audio, and data recording technology, including compact disc, DVD, and Blu-ray." The award will be presented on 25 May 2017 in San Francisco, California. The CE Society Board of Governors (BoG) congratulates Dr. Immink on this great honor. He has been an active member of the CE Society BoG for many years, regularly contributing to our publications and serving as a Distinguished Lecturer.

Kees A. Schouhamer Immink

—Stefan Mozar

Digital Object Identifier 10.1109/MCE.2016.2640519
Date of publication: 15 March 2017

Cyberphysical Systems and Consumer Electronics—The Way Forward

Realizing the emergence of cyberphysical systems and consumer electronics, the IEEE Consumer Electronics (CE) Society Malaysia Chapter organized a national workshop called Cyber Physical System Day (CPS Day) on 18 April 2016. This is one way that the CE Society Malaysia Chapter teamed up with various educational entities, the workforce, and industry to host an educational outreach event for students to learn about cyberphysical systems and their impact on consumer electronics. The event drew together, for the first time, the young innovators who are shaping the future of the emerging market in Malaysia.

The event drew together, for the first time, the young innovators who are shaping the future of the emerging market in Malaysia.

The workshop was a chance to step back and think about how these young students could benefit from such an event. It was also jointly supported and organized by Cyber-Physical System Unit, Department of Computer Science, Faculty of Computer Science and Information Technology (FSKTM) of Universiti Putra Malaysia (UPM). The

Digital Object Identifier 10.1109/MCE.2016.2640520
Date of publication: 15 March 2017